Dear Friends - old and new!

‘Everything that goes around comes around’, so the saying goes, well - history certainly has a way of repeating itself! The writer of Ecclesiastes often repeats ‘there is nothing new under the sun’ and we are inclined to agree at times, when we hear the daily news and look around us at a world that seems to be constantly in a mess. Yet we walk by faith and not by sight (2 Corinthians 5:7), with God, through and in Christ, who by the Holy Spirit is constantly creating and making all things new.

Those of you who know me (Gay Maynard) will also know that seven and half years ago I began a new chapter in my faith journey, having felt for some time that God was nudging me to do a bit of ‘door knocking’, to discern perhaps a new way to serve Jesus and his Church - to see where the path would lead. It meant laying down the place I had in the Church family here and joining the family at St. Denys, ‘The Minster’, and St. Mary’s Upton Scudamore. Doors began to swing open and that journey took me through preparation for selection at a Bishops’ Advisory Panel, three years of theological study with Sarum College, ordination to the diaconate in 2016 and priesthood in 2017 and finally being signed off from three years as Assistant Curate in the River Were Benefice. In case you are wondering, this Benefice was newly created in 2017 to include Bishopstrow, St. Aldhelm’s and Boreham, St. John’s with St. Denys and St. Mary.

We came here, myself with husband Bob and two daughters, Michele and Colette, in August 1987, and have lived on the border between Corsley and Chapmanslade for 32 years. I was very much part of church and village life and whilst it was the right thing for me to go away from the parish to train I have felt strangely disconnected during that time. But now another new journey is about to begin as I am licensed to the Cley Hill Benefice as Associate Priest on Thursday 5th September at 7.00 pm in St. Margaret’s Church Corsley, working with the Rector Pauline. So I do feel that I have rather gone around in a circle, that I am completing a cycle but also beginning a new one, I am looking forward to reconnecting, to renewing relationships and making new ones over the years to come. In the grand scheme of things seven and a half years is not all that long and in God’s economy it is but a twinkling of the eye, but much can change in that time and so I have some catching up to do. I look forward to meeting old friends and making new and hope that many of you will be able to come to St. Margaret’s on Thursday 5th September to share the beginning of this new ministry together, with me. I look forward to seeing you there.

With love and blessings

Gay

MORE INFORMATION TO FOLLOW

Nature Notes

The weather continues to keep us guessing reaching record high temperatures and then unusually strong gales. It feels very autumnal to me at the moment. The breeding season is now over for most birds. They seem to have done well this year, we are seeing lots of young birds in the garden: blackbirds, robins, dunnocks, house sparrows, goldfinches, blue, great and long-tailed tits. The house sparrows appear to have bred very well with one nest still active. The swallows in the stable have produced a second brood of four or possibly five, which started flying about a week ago. Both compartments of the dual house martin nest box have well grown youngsters, being fed well by the parents; I have just heard a feed delivery now, the boxes are outside the window behind me. I don't think the swallows or house martins will have a third brood as it is getting late now. The swifts have already left our shores, there may be odd ones still around; such a quick turn around coming early May, finding a suitable breeding site, laying eggs, rearing young and leaving the beginning of August. Finding a nest site is not always easy with lots of old properties being done up and roof spaces blocked off. To help them, special bricks with all a swift requires to nest can be included in a building or boxes put up under the eaves.

The moorhen youngster is still with us and was joined by an adult, we assume one of its parents, on the 19th July. It has grown well and is as big as the adult if not bigger. It is more wary of me since the adult came on the scene which is a good thing. We have not seen any ducks since the end of July. The kingfisher has been visiting the pond quite regularly, often early in the morning. I am not sure if it has been successful at fishing; quite a few fish are quite big now though I have seen the fish spawning over the last couple of months so there could be some small fry.

We didn't see the mass exodus of toadlets/froglets we expected to have, probably due to the weather as it was rather hot and dry when they might have wanted to leave. I am not sure how many were left in the pond what with moorhens and ducks. Hopefully we did have some go and maybe they left under the cover of darkness on a damp night. On sunny days there have been lots of damselflies and a few dragonflies around the pond.

I have still not seen many butterflies. Most of the species I can count on one hand. There always seems to be more of the whites. I have seen red admiral, peacock and small tortoiseshell but just a few of each. I can remember a time when a buddleia bush would be covered in butterflies but now I struggle to find one. It is very sad. I did see another humming-bird hawkmoth on the 28th July, this time feeding on the phlox in the evening. I have yet to see a painted lady butterfly.

The berries on the old rowan tree in the garden are ripening now; it won't be long before the blackbirds strip it bare! In the hedgerows the berries of the hawthorn are turning colour too, blackberries are ripening and all too soon summer will be over.

Jane Trollope (written 14th August)

God's World, Our Business

Over the summer I have read two important reports. The first was a report by the Food, Farming and Countryside Commission set up by the RSA. The executive summary of the report starts 'Our future depends on the land. The land nourishes and supports us. It provides for our nutrition, our health and our wellbeing. Food and farming depend critically on the fate of the countryside. Those who live and work here are the stewards of this relationship but the responsibility for it rests with us all.'

The report highlights the urgency for us to recover and regenerate nature; and to restore health and wellbeing to both people and planet. Decades of policy to produce ever cheaper food has created perverse and detrimental consequences. The UK has the third cheapest food amongst developed countries, but the highest food insecurity in Europe. It calls for radical change, the development of sustainable systems, an investment in skills and rural infrastructure.

The second report 'Counting lives' comes from the Children's Society. It highlights the exploitation of children for criminal gain, particularly through the 'county lines' model of distributing drugs around the country through the use of dedicated mobile phone 'lines' and calls for statutory agencies to have access to appropriate resources to identify and support victims. There are some children particularly vulnerable to exploitation particularly those growing up in poverty, having learning difficulties, being excluded from school or a looked after child and there is increasing evidence that primary school age children are targeted.

All these issues are not just words on paper, but our issues, involving people in Wiltshire and Dorset. They involve God's world and God's children, and force us to look at ourselves and our churches to see what we can do. Both reports are shocking in their own way, they call for us to look outwards, to see with eyes of faith what is happening in our towns and villages, our countryside and farms, our economy and social provision and to speak and act.

I hope that as a diocese we can partner with others in taking forward some of the recommendations of these reports and contribute towards a better world and that as individuals and churches we continue to think about life around us and respond as we are called to do. Acting with care and compassion and speaking up for justice, equity and those whose voices are seldom heard.

The book is: The Hare with the Amber Eyes by Edmund De Waal. 264 wood and ivory carvings, none of them bigger than a matchbox. Edmund de Waal was entranced when he first encountered the collection in his great uncle Iggy's Tokyo apartment. When he inherited the 'netsuke', they unlocked a story far larger and more dramatic than he could ever have imagined. From a burgeoning empire in Odessa to fin de siècle Paris, from occupied Vienna to Tokyo, he traces the netsukes' journey through generations of his remarkable family against the backdrop of a tumultuous century.

Cars damaged by hedges

Many villagers have experienced their cars being damaged whilst driving through the Deverills. We have an increasing number of large vehicles passing through the villages especially after an RTA on the A303. Our cars are getting bigger, which means less room for passing on-coming traffic without experiencing some damage to paint work due to over-hanging hedges. Hedgerows each year are encroaching further onto the roads and are not being cut back enough, especially on blind bends. This results in hedges getting woody which causes severe and costly damage to paint work etc. I am sure we would all be very grateful if the hedges could be cut back with this in mind.

Longbridge Deverill Flower Show

From setting up in strong winds to keeping the audience entertained between showers, the Longbridge Deverill, Hill Deverill and Crockerton Flower Show ran with well oiled precision. The show itself had more entrants than ever and there was a fine selection of scarecrows for the Crockerton Cup including a scary animatronic. Local landlord Laurie Creighton kept us entertained in the main arena with audience participation and help from Jon the Jester's circus skills.

Well done to all the stall holders for squashing up and sharing the cover that was tied down. The dog show had lots of waggy tails and doggy facial hair as well as a chicken in the 'Not a Dog' category. A super hero hobby horse race was followed by a tug of war before all the children pulled the JCB belonging to Tim 'Digger' Davis into the arena where he demonstrated his precision skills. The day wound up with live music into the evening with the Tim Steer band & Duke Box.
