Dear Friends,

I think this is the hardest letter I have ever had to write. It is the beginning of March and the morning after the Russian bombing of a maternity unit in Mariupol; the Ukrainian city is under renewed bombardment and food and water are running out. I have no idea what the situation will be in Ukraine when you actually read this letter. I wish I could say that I think things will be better, but I don't think they will.

From the vantage point of our privileged lives in the UK I imagine we are all responding to the terrible events in Ukraine with a mixture of appalled disbelief and a desperate sense of helplessness; we are left with questions for which there are no easy answers. What difference does it make to the people of Mariupol if I get down on my knees and pray, what difference does it make to the 2 million people who have fled their homes in 12 days if I light a candle each Sunday for them? And the ultimate question for Christians: where is God in all this, and if there is a God, why does he not do something to end the carnage we see being perpetrated against innocent civilians and described as 'not a war: It is Russia against humanity'.

I do not have a set of neat answers to these questions, questions that have haunted every generation of human beings since time immemorial. I believe in a God of love who shares our pain and whose own heart breaks at the terrible suffering we inflict upon each other. I do not believe in a God who sits on high watching what we do with indifference and who is imperious to our suffering.

This month on Sunday 17th April we celebrate the most important feast of the Church's year, Easter Day; I wonder how that sits with what I have said above? Before we get to the joy of Easter we go through the sombre events of Holy Week, culminating in the cruelty and terrible darkness of Good Friday. In the barbaric torture of the crucifixion, God shows us that he is with us in the awful darkness of human suffering, where the choices made by one despotic leader mean what amounts to genocide is inflicted upon a nation. After Good Friday comes Holy Saturday; perhaps this is where we find ourselves today? It is a kind of liminal in-between space where we are forced to live side by side with great evil not knowing when it will end, and feeling powerless to change anything.

Easter day emerges out of the depths of human sin to show us, even though we cannot see it or often believe it, in the end, love is stronger than evil. We see love shining in the care and compassion being shown to refugees crossing the border into Poland, in the generosity of those donating money, clothes and essential items, in the comfort given to a young Russian conscript by some Ukrainian women as he cried for his mother. Sometimes it seems Easter Day is very far away; sometimes we can't see it at all in our despair; sometimes love breaks through anyway. Let us pray that somehow, even if it is in a very small way, we can try to embody that love in our response to the suffering people of Ukraine.

May the blessing and hope of Easter be yours, with love and prayers,

Pauline

"We will all die". Those were the words of the taxi driver who drove me from the airport into central Beirut in October last year. I had asked him what he thought the future held for the Lebanese people. Perhaps I should have expected a blunt response. An uneasy peace has prevailed in Lebanon since the end of its bloody civil war in 1990. But this was put under immense pressure by the outward ripples of the financial crisis of 2008, and by the explosion in the port of Beirut which ripped the city apart in 2020. Its economy badly mis-managed; its politics corrupt and ineffective; swathes of its territory controlled by Hezbollah: it is difficult for the Lebanese people to be hopeful, and it is difficult to be hopeful for them.

I remembered my taxi driver's words when – still in the depths of this cruellest of all seasons of Lent – I began to think about writing this Easter letter. President Putin attacked Ukraine barely one week after Ash Wednesday, and many of us have found it impossible to think of anything but the suffering of the Ukrainians ever since. Their cities under siege; their neighbours forced to flee; their children taking up arms: it is difficult to be hopeful for them.

Of course, in both Lebanon and in Ukraine glimpses of hope are clearly visible. In Beirut the streets are full as people meet, drink the best coffee in the Levant, eat kebabs, converse, and go about their business. The graffiti is poignant: Martyr's Square contains portraits of the 200+ citizens who were killed in the 2020 blast, bearing the hashtag 'They Matter'. We hear similar stories from the cellars and trenches of Kyiv and from Ukraine's other cities, stories of great courage and great compassion. Faced with desperate odds men and women retain their humanity; they dig deep and discover the resilience that they need to help them survive.

But these are only glimpses. What about secure and lasting hope for Lebanon, for Ukraine, for South Sudan, for Syria? Contrary to my taxi driver's fatalistic resignation the Easter hope promises that "We will not all die, but we will be changed". Where is that hope to be found in these acutely distressed corners of our world? I have no answer. All I can do is read the Easter story again. All I can do is remember that on Palm Sunday the disciples of Jesus surely had no thought whatever of his imminent arrest and trial. All I can do is remember that on Good Friday they surely had no thought whatever of the future of their mission – no thought at all beyond the cold, solid certainties of his deadly wounds and the rock-hewn tomb. All I can do is remember that on the first Easter morning their earth-shattering realization that Jesus lived must have been beyond description – a new reality that none of them had imagine or foreseen. I think that's what hope looks like - this Lent.

The Very Revd Nicholas Papadoulos

Thank You

Sheila would like to thank the wonderful caring people who looked after Richard when he tripped and fell on the pavement in Sand Street in, Longbridge a few weeks ago. As they were told not to move him they covered him with blankets and stayed beside him keeping him safe and warm, talking to him in the bitterly cold wind and rain until the paramedics arrived. Our sincere thanks also go to the lovely nurse who was on holiday with her husband from Portsmouth, who actually knelt on the pavement to treat Richard. If anyone knows who she is please can they tell us so that we can thank her in the proper manner. Sheila would like to inform everyone that Richard is now home and recovering slowly. Telephone 216306.

Calling all Trustees

Do you have a trust in your family or are you a trustee looking after money or property for someone, such as a child? If so then from September 2022 it is likely you will need to register the trust with HMRC. Currently, certain trusts need to be registered with HMRC if liable for Income Tax, Inheritance Tax, Stamp Duty or Capital Gains Tax. But from September 2022 it will be necessary to register nearly all 'express' trusts, even if there is no tax to pay.

What is an 'express' trust? It is a trust created deliberately, such as a trust created by someone's will or a trust a person makes by a deed during their lifetime. This means after a person has died, if they have a trust in their will which continues 2 years after the death, it will need to be registered.

Examples of the kind of trusts that will need to be registered include:

- A trust holding money for a child who has not reached 18 (or 21/25)
- A discretionary trust (where money is held for several beneficiaries, but the trustees can decide how to use the funds)
- A life interest trust, when someone dies leaving some or all their estate in a trust for someone for their lifetime and subsequently to other beneficiaries.

There are a few trusts which will be exempt from registration, they include:

- Certain charitable trusts
- Trusts that are set up to be used at a later date with less than £100 in them
- Some trusts for land, pensions, and insurance policies
- Trusts imposed by law or by a court

If you are not sure, it is worth checking.

Who is responsible for Registering the Trust? Trustees are responsible. If you are an executor of a will, you may be a trustee. The Trust Registration Portal has helpful advice on their website www.gov.uk/guidance/register-a-trust-as-a-trustee#not-register or contact Rachel Saunders at Forrester Sylvester Mackett by email rachelsaunders@fmsolicitors.co.uk or telephone 01793 522688

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE PARISH OF UPPER DEVERILLS

6.00 pm Wednesday 20th April at Upper Deverills Village Hall

Come along and air your views or raise your concerns. The Chair of the Parish Council will give a brief report on the year's activities and successes and the Village Hall Committee will conduct their short AGM.

There will then be an open forum with the theme:

Community facilities: a strategy for the future

What future would you like to see for the village hall, our churches and recreational, social and educational facilities? See the Upper Deverills website

'Let's do all we can'

Thank you so much to everyone who donated items for the Ukrainian refugees in Poland, and to the volunteers who manned the village hall, sorted all the items then packed and labelled them. You know who you are and you are all stars! Of course, it may be that we have to ramp up again, with a wider trawl, to send items to Hungary, Moldova, Romania and Slovakia. If so, we will let you know immediately that happens. Meanwhile, we have asked Wiltshire Council for an update on the refugee situation here – how many people are willing to take them in etc.

See the Upper Deverills website for the latest as we hear it.

Thank you!

Upper Deverills Wildlife & Conservation Group

Following the announcement in last month's Parish News about the newly formed Upper Deverills Wildlife and Conservation Group, we are now making plans for the first of a series of bird surveys that will begin in mid to late April.

The principal aim is to record the presence, or otherwise, of Skylarks, Corn Buntings or Yellowhammers along pre-selected routes across farmland in the Parish area using rights of way, unless otherwise agreed with the land owners. The birds selected are Red Listed as birds of High Conservation Concern [BOCC5]. During each survey we will see many other birds and also make observations on insects and wildflowers that might be spotted along the survey route, so there is much of general interest which might appeal to anyone who would like to be involved. Each survey will take about 2 hours and will need to take place in early morning, typically not later than two hours after sunrise when birds will be most active. We anticipate there will be about a dozen various routes (transects) and each will be visited 3 times, about 3 weeks apart, in the period mid April and until late June. Surveys will only take place in 'good' weather.

If you would like to be involved please make contact. Participation is open to all and no previous knowledge or experience is necessary. Each survey will be led by someone who knows what to look out for and they will coordinate dates, timings, routes and participation on a village/area basis. For details please call: Ted Flint 844507 (Kingston) Alison Rymell 844819 (Monkton) Peter Marsh 840828 - Brixton.

Flood Prevention

The boy scout's motto is BE PREPARED, if you are worried about flooding then prepare for it and buy some sandbags or get hold of some compact alternatives such as FloodSax.

They are very compact and arrive boxed, flat-packed so are easy to store in the garage. Before they are activated FloodSax alternative sandbags are incredibly lightweight, amazingly weighing just 7 ounces, yet once expanded, a row of standard 500mm by 450mm by 200mm FloodSax are strong enough to stop a powerful torrent of water. For more information see www.floodsax.co.uk. Unfortunately, they are expensive - £25 for 5 is about the cheapest you can find online, so another alternative would be to use bags of Building Sand which can be purchased at B & M store in Warminster for about £1. Have a look also at the other flood defence mechanisms on Amazon – ranging from Osmo flood barriers, Hydrabarriers, heavy duty polypropylene and traditional hessian bags, neoprene rubber strip, temporary air brick seals etc; See www.amazon.co.uk

Nature Notes

There is so much to report at the moment, it is difficult to know where to start. The pond is alive with toads and frogs but in smaller numbers. There is a sizeable patch of frog spawn in the floating weed down the house end of the pond and a small bit up the other end which may be added to. The toad spawn is laid deep in the water amongst the weed so not visible. As the frog spawn floats near the surface and easy to see, it is vulnerable to predation. We have had a mallard pair coming recently which I think are watching the spawn waiting for it to develop and become more nutritious. All the amphibian activity has been spotted by buzzards; I am fairly sure we have two individuals, a smaller predominately dark brown male and a larger lighter coloured female. The other day the female managed to pick up a whole bundle of toads which must have contained at least half a dozen. It was quite a weight for her to lift, first of all she crash landed in the small daffodils (which survived!) where one toad crawled away, and then she lugged her haul to the top of the rockery where another toad crept off (sadly only to be recaptured) and then she proceeded to eat the lot. Afterwards she flew up into the silver birch and digested her meal.

I am still wanting to remove a lot of branches blown into the pond by the storms. I will have to be careful not to hurt any amphibians and not remove any toad spawn; I will collect it in a plastic trug, wash it off in some of the pond water and return the water to the pond. Then I will be able to re-erect the kingfisher perch I broke when I was clearing debris from the pond edge. It needs doing as we had a female come to fish this morning; identified as female as the lower mandible was orange-red (female wears lipstick). She was using the remaining bit of the perch and was probably wondering why it was so short!

We have been treated to beautiful spring days recently. Earlier in the week I spotted my first brimstone butterfly and a small tortoiseshell, and later removed another small tortoiseshell from the garage where I imagine it had been over-wintering. I could hear skylarks singing in the distance over nearby fields. The great spotted woodpecker is drumming and the green woodpecker is very vocal with its laugh like call. The wrens are singing loudly; for nearly our smallest bird (the goldcrest has that accolade) it really packs a punch with such a strong voice and the distinctive trill at the end. Mainly at dusk, I have been hearing the seeping call of redwings which I associate with autumn; these ones I am hearing will be migrating back eastwards to Scandinavia. Not long now before the swallows come and then the house martins.

PS: Ukraine colours; yellow daffodils and blue of the grape hyacinths!
